

To the commission,

October 31, 2005

I have been an amateur radio operator for 42 years—now holding an extra class license—, with countless hours experience operating CW. I adamantly oppose removing the Morse Code testing requirement for amateur radio licenses. I agree with the arguments in the attachment included which is transnational in scope but from another country's licensing service. Rather than repeat it, I'll just let you read it.

Respectfully Submitted,
Earl S. Gosnell III